

Previous Index
Next

Students Blake Rasmussen and Jessica McCall stand beside the Tahoma Outdoor Academy display. The program, led by teachers Tracy Krause, Mike Hanson, and Jamie Vollrath, provides students with experience stewarding natural resources through restoration and trail work.

Previous Index
Next

Rebecca Potter, Earth Hero from the Secondary Academy for Success, peruses the display of the Rose Hill Junior High Environmental Club.

Previous Index
Next

Seattle Country Day teacher Sarah Willis and student Cole McCullough stand near the display of their stewardship activities.

Previous Index
Next

The Chautauqua Kid's Garden display shows how the garden functions as an outdoor classroom. Chautauqua teachers Glenda Berliner, Tina Taylor and Gerie Wilson earned an Earth Hero at School Award for their work.

Previous Index
Next

Kirsten Minor, an Earth Hero winner from Lake Washington High School, wins a prize from roving recycling quiz maven “Edna Marmite.”

Previous Index
Next

Apollo Elementary Principal Marla Erath is applauded for correctly answering a question about the environment from roving recycling quiz maven “Edna Marmite.” Way to go, Principal Erath! (Did you notice that Erath is an anagram of Earth?)

Previous Index
Next

Clara Manahan from West Woodland Elementary describes the school's composting and recycling program. With her are fellow Earth Hero winners Teal Stannard and Philip Park.

Previous Index
Next

Earth Heroes and their guests enjoy the program.

Previous Index
Next

Executive Sims introduces Earth Hero Ben Wheeler from Explorer West Middle School.

Previous Index
Next

Olivia Dominquez and Sinclair Nitz explain the results of the Laurelhurst Elementary School lunchroom composting and recycling program.

Previous Index
Next

Nate Dalton, a student at the Secondary Academy for Success, talks about the activities of the school's Green Team that earned them an Earth Hero award.

Previous Index Next

Students Jessica McCall and Blake Rasmussen make acceptance remarks on behalf of the Tahoma Outdoor Academy.