

Bill Dewey

Taylor Shellfish Company

Since receiving his degree in shellfish biology from the University of Washington in 1981 Bill Dewey has worked twenty-four years as a shellfish farmer in Washington State. He currently manages public affairs for Taylor Shellfish Company, the largest producer of farmed shellfish in the country, and owns and operates his own clam farm in Samish Bay. Bill has taken an active role throughout his career on environmental and human health regulations as they affect the shellfish farming industry.